

Harry S. Truman – The Truman Library

Harry Truman: This library is not a library. It's an archives building, with the idea of keeping the records of the government in an orderly manner. The objective is to obtain microfilm reports on all the Presidential papers. It'll take a little while to get that done, but when they do get it done, this place will be the center of the study of the Presidency of the United States.