The following references in the file captioned "Robert Durant Feild" set forth information regarding the activities of Elizabeth Catlett White during the period 7/4/42 through 12/15/47, in Louisiana, District of Columbia, New York, and Mexico. White corresponded with Feild and asked to use his name as a reference for a Rosenwald fellowship. Feild wrote to the Director for Fellowship of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, 4901 Ellis Ave., Chicago, in behalf of White. White was on a leave of absence from the George Washington Carver School for art study on a Rosenwald fellowship. She also corresponded with Feild to enlist his support of a "War Mobilization Rally".

Mora said that Greenspan was in Mexico on a special errand for certain information for a report which she felt could have been obtained by people already in Mexico. Mora claimed that she had no intention of seeing Greenspan, but on 2/8/62, Nina Greenspan, Richard Greenspan's wife, stated that he was conferring on that date with Mora. Prior to his departure from Mexico, Greenspan got into a dispute with Mora who was trying to secure Mexican citizenship. One of Greenspan's children remarked, "Do you know that Betty Mora can't be of any use to my daddy until the President (of Mexico) signs her citizenship papers which are on his desk?" A large stack of books and pamphlets which Mora described as of a very inflammatory nature and some of which had been banned from Mexico, were delivered to Mora's home for Greenspan. Mora accused Greenspan of jeopardizing her position in Mexico. Greenspan gave her the money to pay for the pamphlets and said he would pick them up. He never came by for the pamphlets, therefore Mora sold them and donated the proceeds to the PCM. She said she would write to Greenspan and thank him for the contribution.

The following references in the file captioned "Taller de Grafica Popular" set forth information regarding the activities of Elizabeth Catlett Mora during the period May, 1952 through 12/5/62, in Mexico. Mora, a US citizen and an artist, was a member of the TGP and served at one time as its Secretary-Treasurer. She carried on a regular correspondence with "progressive unions and organizations in the US." "Progressive" used by Mora indicated unions and organizations which followed the CP line. Mora, although not actually a member of the PCM, was a strong supporter of the PCM faction of the TGP, which was headed by her husband, Francisco Mora. She collected funds for the PCM faction and assisted it in every way. Some of Mora's paintings were exhibited in Moscow, Russia. Mora was also an associate of the ACGM.

MEX-18 and MEX-19 advised on 12/31/62, that Elizabeth Catlett Mora had been trying to arrange for an engineer from Los Angeles, to travel to Cuba. Before she could complete the arrangements for a visa for this individual through the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City, he attempted to expedite the matter by contacting the Czech Consul in Los Angeles and the Cuban Minister of Exterior in Havana, Cuba. Because of that action the engineer lost his chance for a visa. However, Mora planned to go ahead with attempts to get him into Cuba, since he was a qualified engineer and would be needed in Cuba. Mora identified the engineer as the nephew of a woman named Freda who formerly lived with Pablo O'Higgins, an ACGM associate, and who died a few years before.

It was noted that the above information had been received by sources from Mora and that Mora had a tendency to exaggerate her importance.
