2. Office of the General Counsel Administrative and General Subject Files (1967-1968). These records deal with routine administrative and program matters that do not warrant continued preservation. The files have administrative value, but do not contain documentation having either evidential or informational value concerning the programs and activities of the Office of the General Counsel. The administrative subjects deal with matters such as accounting, appropriations, establishing a central sales point for audiovisual materials, forms, employee parking, procurement of magazine subscriptions, and official travel that are routinely disposable under the General Records Schedules. Program related subject files include: agreements between the Commerce Department and other Federal agencies; appeals board matters; civil rights; legislation; litigation; outdoor recreation; and, policies and procedures concerning trade secrets/proprietary information that contain duplicate or information copies of documents filed elsewhere in the Office of General Counsel and/or printed materials about the subject. 3. Office of the General Counsel Records of the Oil Import Appeals Board Case Files, 1959-60. These case files were accumulated by the Commerce Department's representative to the Oil Import Appeals Board (OIAB). The OIAB was established by Presidential Proclamation 3279 in 1959 and consisted of 3 members: the Chair from the Department of the Interior, under whose auspices the Board operated from 1959 through 1974, and one member each from the Departments of Commerce and Defense. OIAB's Rules and Procedures were published in the Federal Register on December 23, 1959 (24 F.R. 10444). Carl F. Oechsle, an Assistant Secretary of Commerce, was the principal Commerce Department representative during the period covered by these records. These files were in the custody of Allen R. DeLong, a Special Assistant to the General Counsel of the Department of Commerce, who also participated in the deliberations of the OIAB.

Documentation includes: the Decision of the Board concerning the matter before it; a petition from an oil company to the Board; company correspondence providing supplemental information requested by the Board, for example, company financial statements; thermofax copies of correspondence; Congressional correspondence on behalf of a constituent (found in a few of the case files); transcript of proceedings before the Board (mimeographed copies); hand-written notes about the case; summary of petition; and, supplemental petition, where required. These case files consist of white tissue copies of petitions, correspondence, Interior Department letterhead, and related case materials, indicating that these are duplicates provided by the OIAB to the Commerce Department's representative to it. The files are arranged by the name of the petitioning company and assigned a serial number. The first folder in Box 1 contains an index to the cases.

The files provide routine documentation of the resolution of petitions brought before the OIAB. In a few instances, a case became the subject of litigation. Court records would contain details of their resolution. These case files have administrative and legal value, but do not warrant continued preservation.

Loosely arranged by subject, the files deal with such matters as relocation activities including "Operation Alert," operations to test emergency readiness and mobilization for war, programs to ensure the readiness of U.S. industry to mobilize its resources should war be declared, and records related to the transfer of a National Bureau of Standards (NBS) facility to the Department of Defense (DoD). Some of these are stamped with "Roper," indicating that these are the files of Burt Roper, the General Counsel. A few of the folders may have been extracted from other files series and these could be record copies.

The case files document compliance audits of companies conducted under the provisions of the Controlled Materials Plan and related requirements established under the Defense Production Act, and security investigations of individuals and companies. They contain routine periodic reports, consisting of APRA forms 6 and 8, with a cover memorandum following a standard format, concerned with mundane matters such as storage and availability of raw materials, fabrication processes and costs, and employee training.
